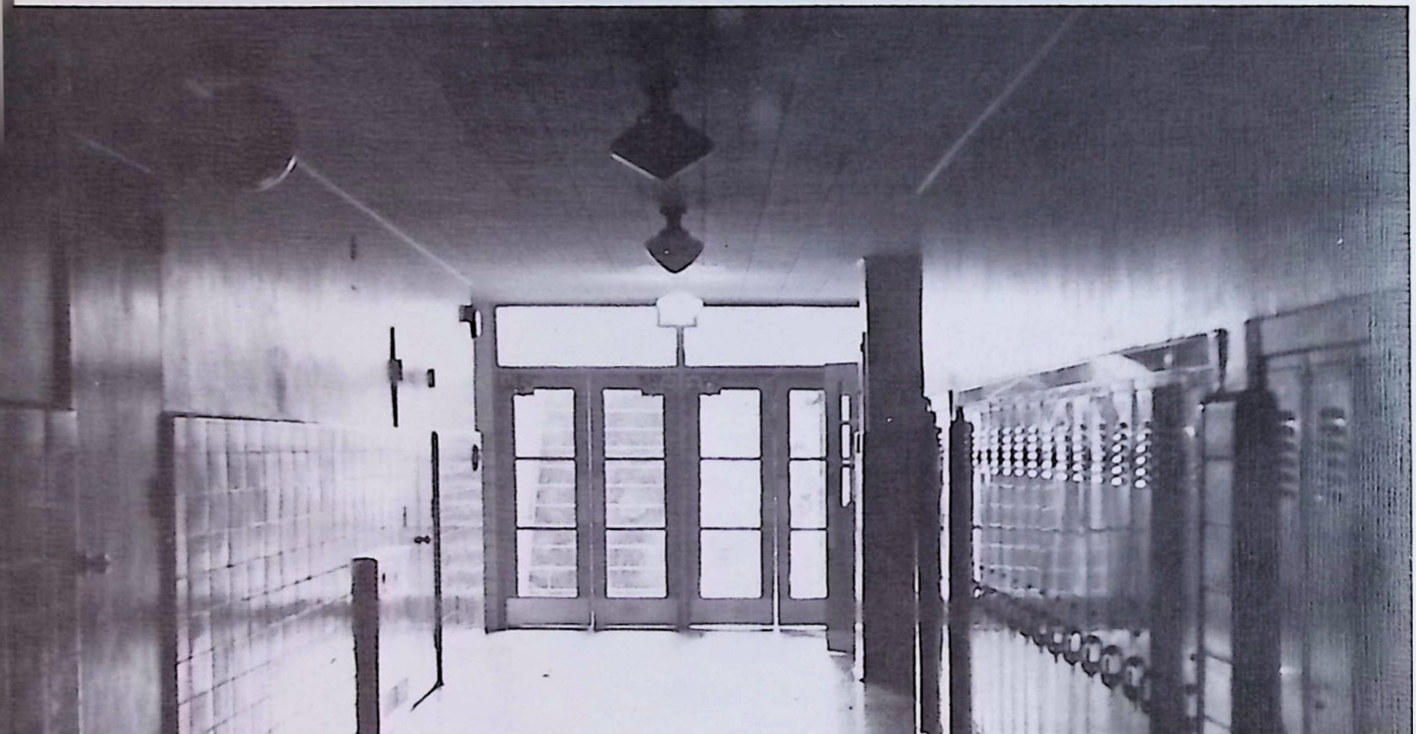
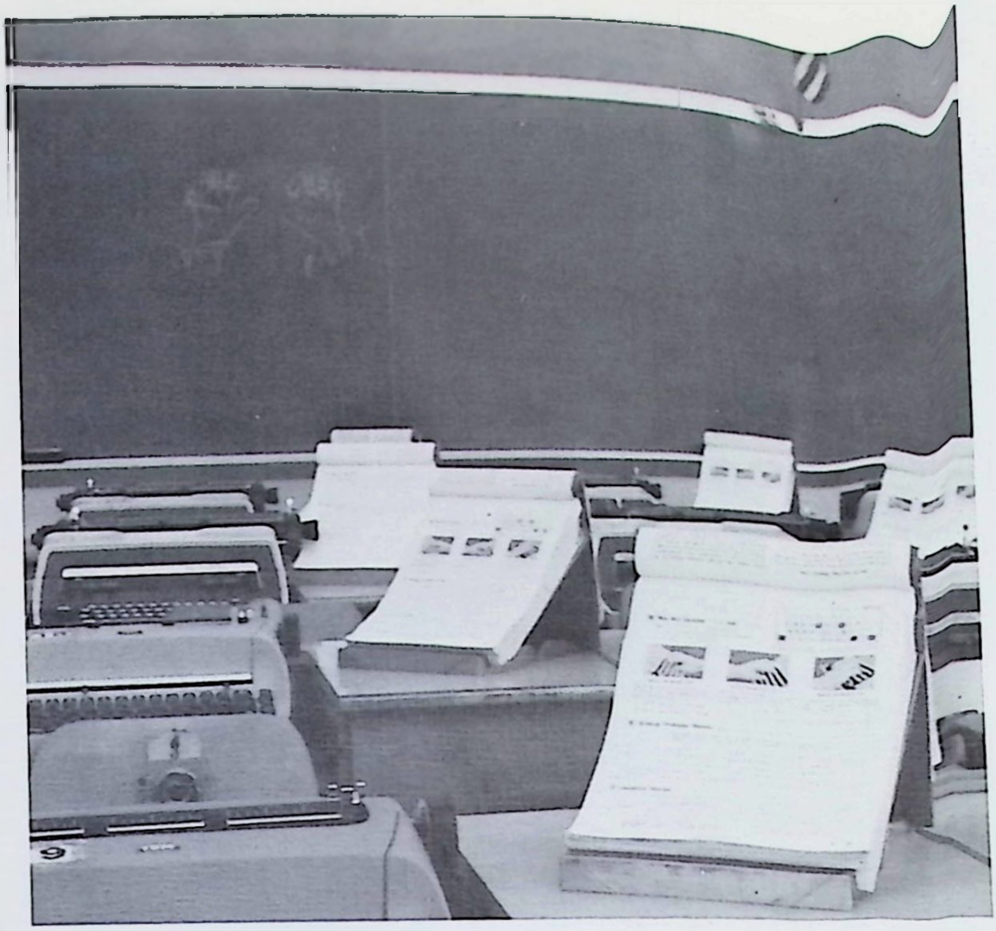
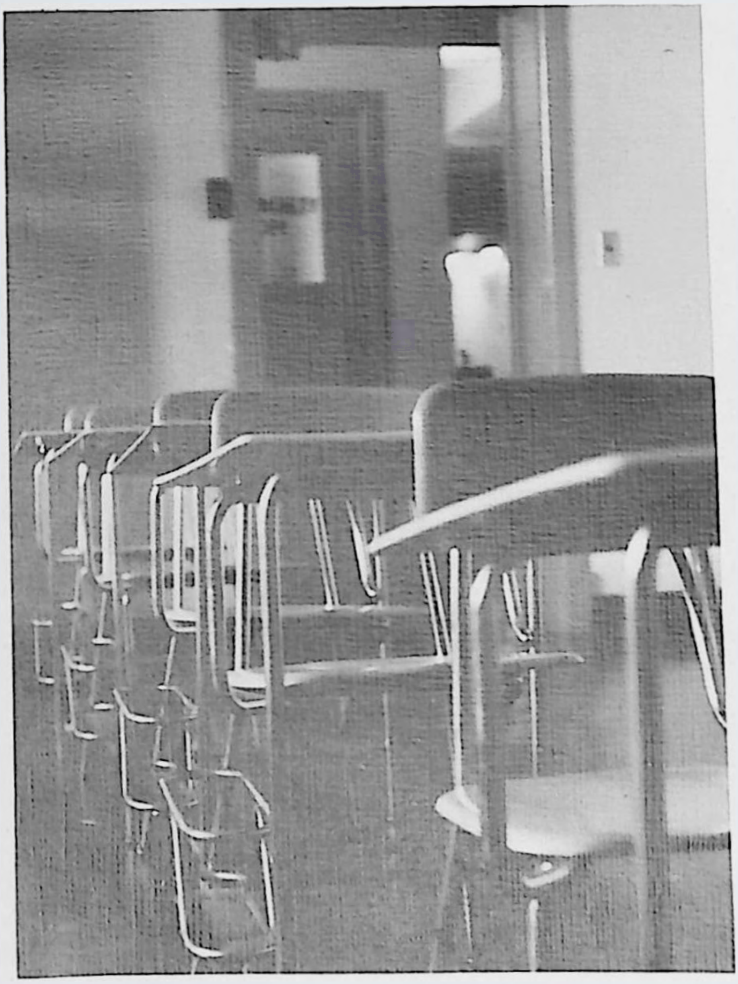
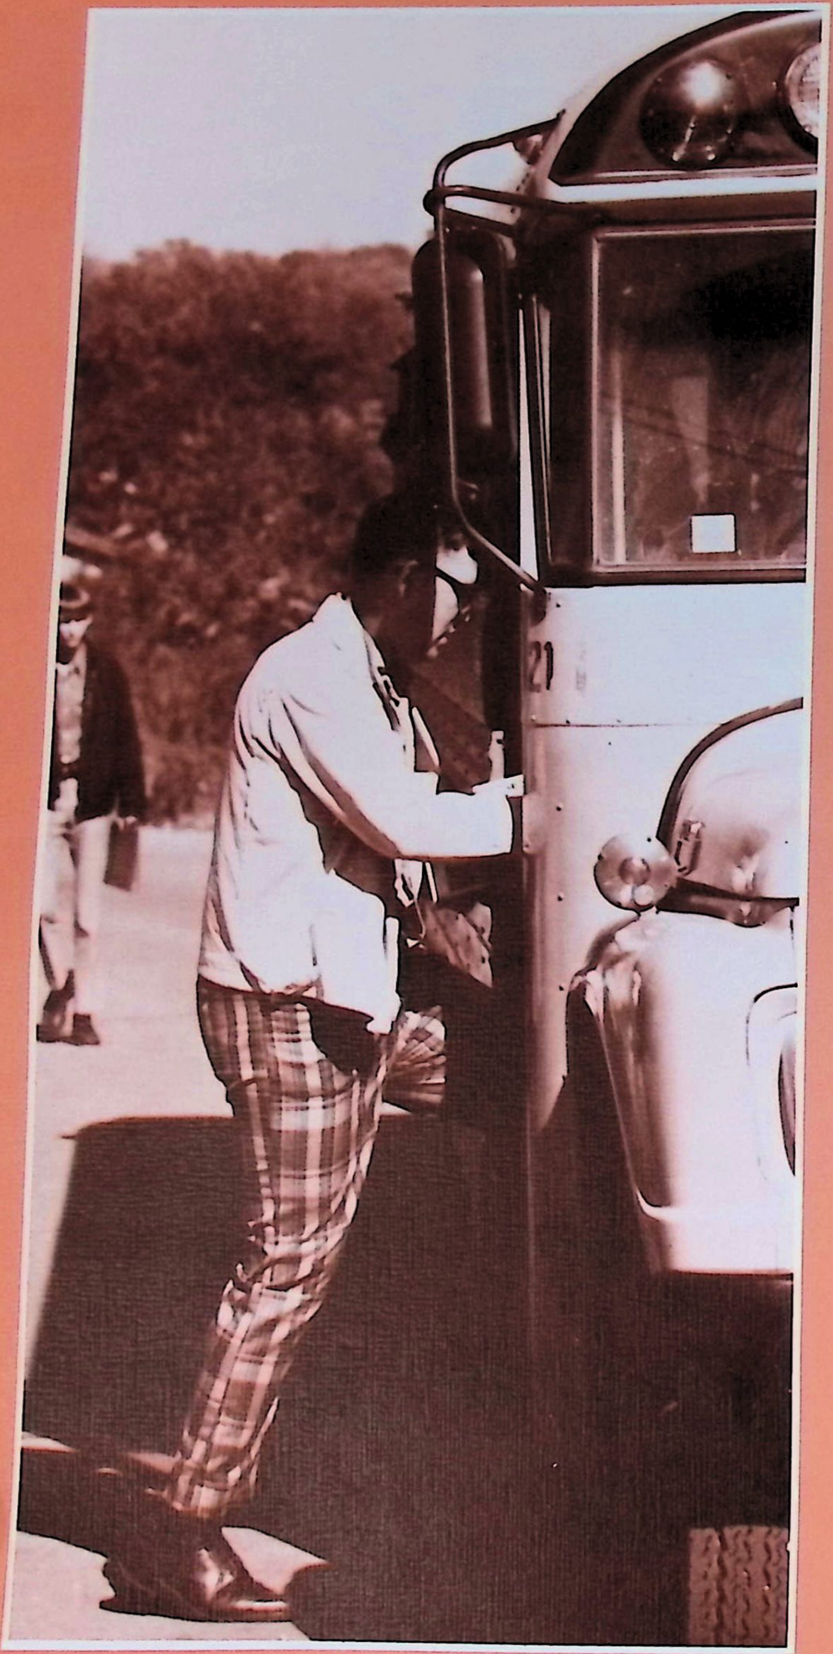
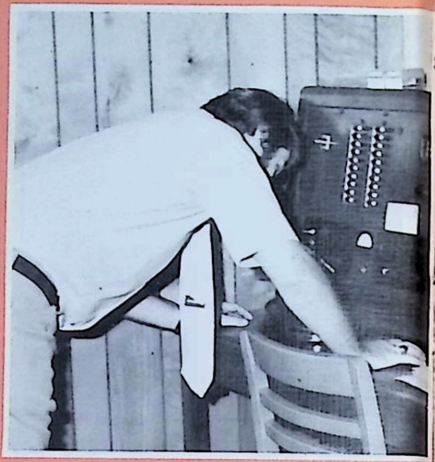
Stillness, emptiness and silence characterize a school without people. But each changing year brings an anticipation of new classes, familiar faces, and exciting and different happenings in which to participate. This total involvement is fused into the Southmoreland discovery.











It begins with a rough awakening from peaceful slumber by the jangling of an alarm. With eyes only half open, in a dazed state of semi-consciousness, you are herded into a crowded school bus with dozens of other sleepy-eyed victims. Minutes later (you are almost awake now) you hear some fuzzy announcements, and before you know it you have miraculously arrived at the first destination of the day — period one. As the endless seconds drag on and on you start to lose hope — especially if you are just about to be called on, and then . . . welcome relief, the BELL. You join the mad rush in the hall and are literally swept away to second period, third and fourth.

Now it is lunch time. Pushing your way into the stream of slowly moving bodies, you grab a tray, and hurry down the line. Is that the bell already? It's off to fifth period, sixth, seventh, eighth. Ahh, eighth period. Tick, tick, tick. With the final ringing of the bell, slamming of hundreds of locker doors, and thunder of feet pounding out of the building, you grasp the realization that you have just experienced a typical day at Southmoreland.

Pep rallies generate excitement. Hundreds of bodies packed closely together in one hot, stuffy, crowded area. Screaming, yelling — agitated faces — strained voices all adding to the charged atmosphere and the process of discovery.

Good Luck Bill

There is nothing like school spirit — but to see Southmoreland during Spirit Week is a discovery in itself. School Day brings out the "little kid" in everyone with bobby socks and tie shoes. Clash Day puts forth mutilated artistic talent, resulting in weird combinations of colors and patterns. Dress-up Day is a little change of pace, and Western Day appears with a bang as the school is filled with brightly garbed Indians in leather and moccasins and cowboys complete with boots, hats, holsters, and even guns. But Color Day climaxes the week with a spectacular showing of red and black, letting the team know that everyone is behind them and that the Spirit Week effort has been a success.

Rainbow colored gowns, happy tears, colorful floats, the blaring music of the band, and anticipation — these all make up the excitement of discovery at Southmoreland during the Homecoming parade. The weeks of preparation and last-minute details have finally ended, and as each car and float passes by there are many mixed emotions — joy, wonder, surprise, sadness, and most of all, treasured remembrances.

Captains

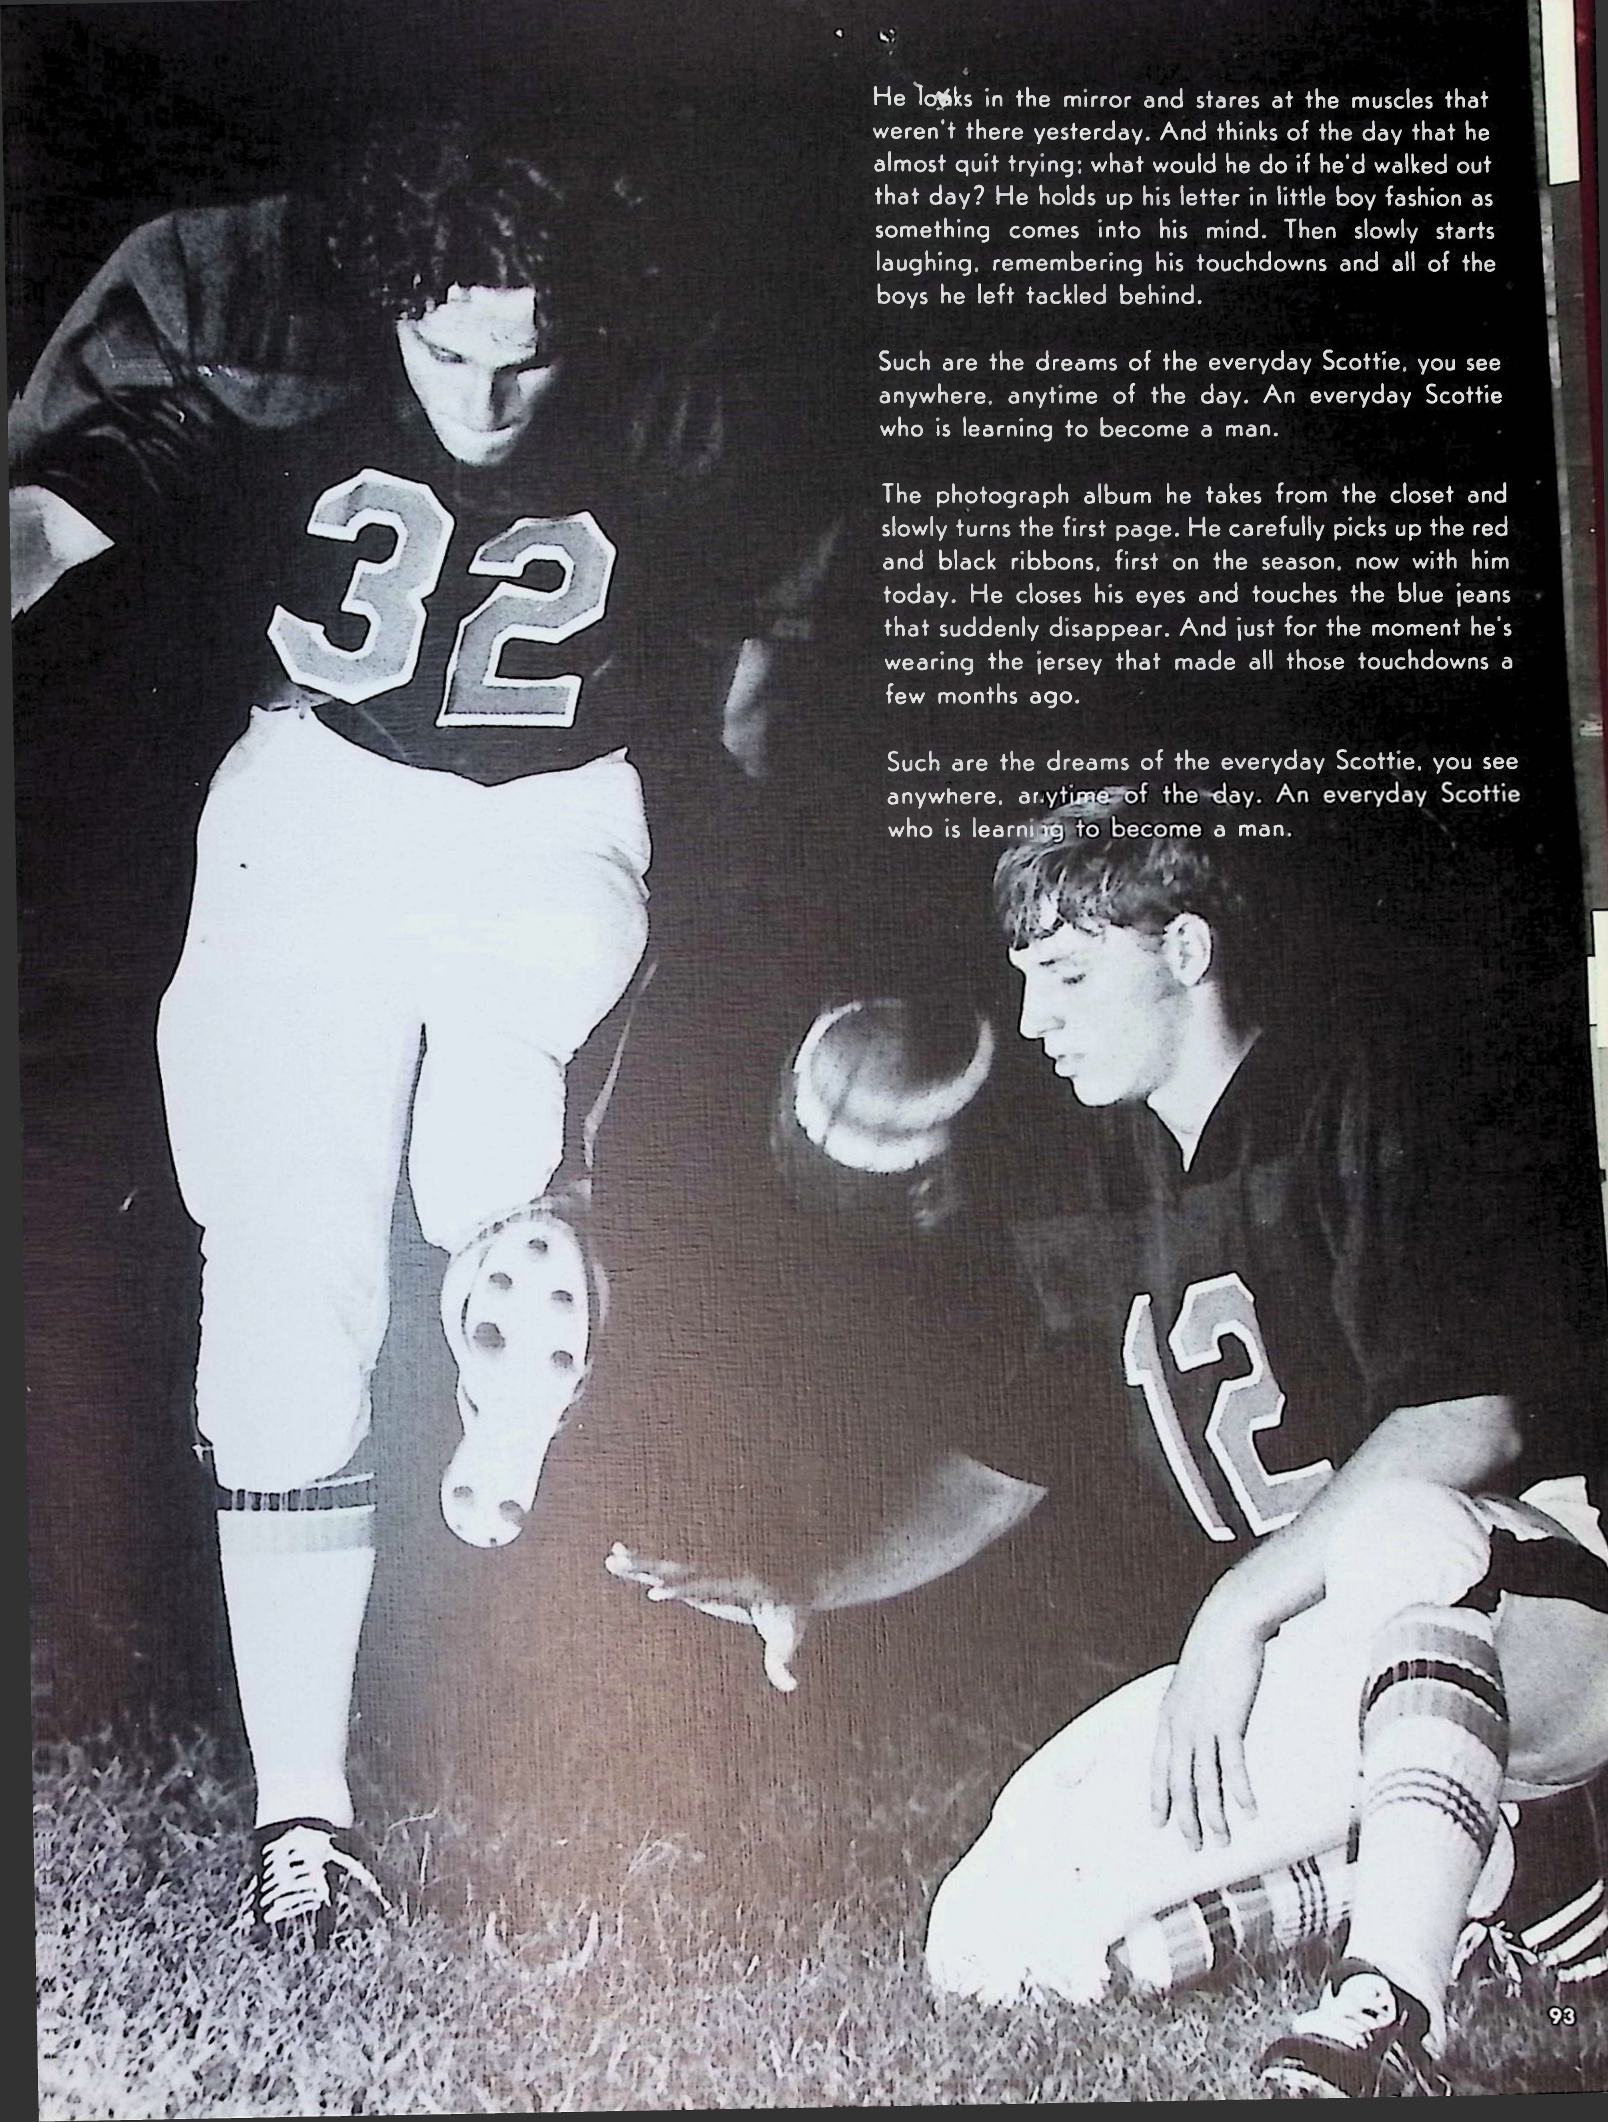
Frank Smodic, Bill Daugherty, Tom Funk, and Dan Pawlikowsky



He looks in the mirror and stares at the muscles that weren't there yesterday. And thinks of the day that he almost quit trying; what would he do if he'd walked out that day? He holds up his letter in little boy fashion as something comes into his mind. Then slowly starts laughing, remembering his touchdowns and all of the boys he left tackled behind.

Such are the dreams of the everyday Scottie, you see anywhere, anytime of the day. An everyday Scottie who is learning to become a man.

The photograph album he takes from the closet and slowly turns the first page. He carefully picks up the red and black ribbons, first on the season, now with him today. He closes his eyes and touches the blue jeans that suddenly disappear. And just for the moment he's wearing the jersey that made all those touchdowns a few months ago.

Such are the dreams of the everyday Scottie, you see anywhere, anytime of the day. An everyday Scottie who is learning to become a man.

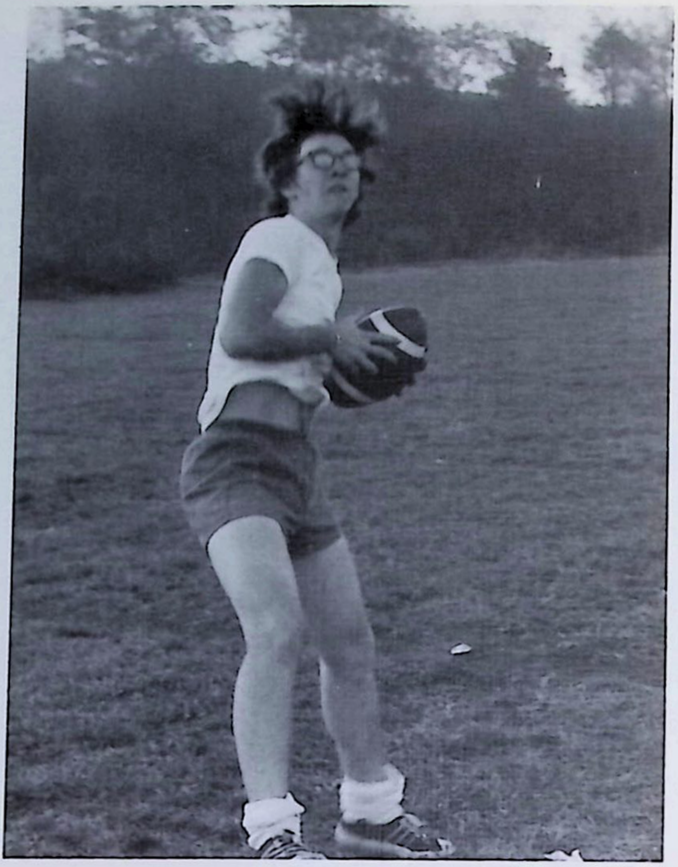
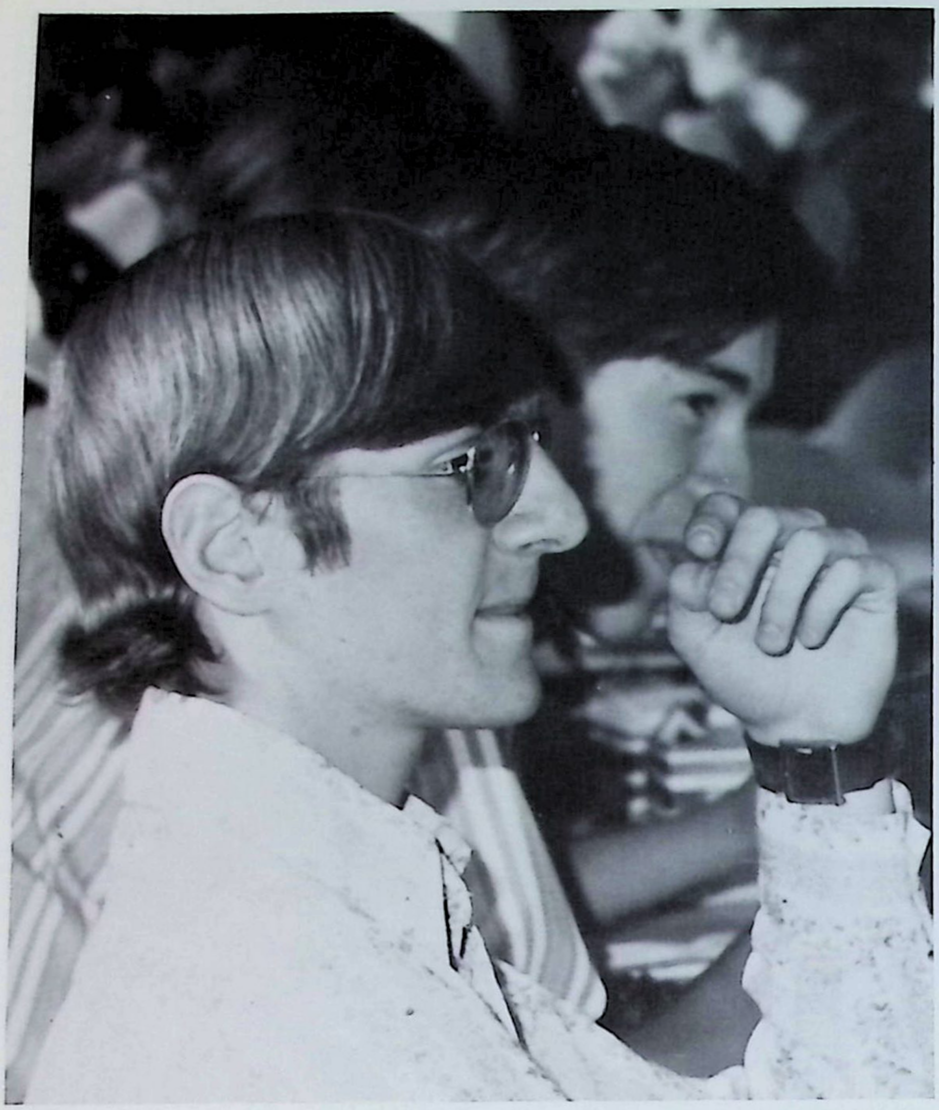
The Graduating Class of 1972 . . .

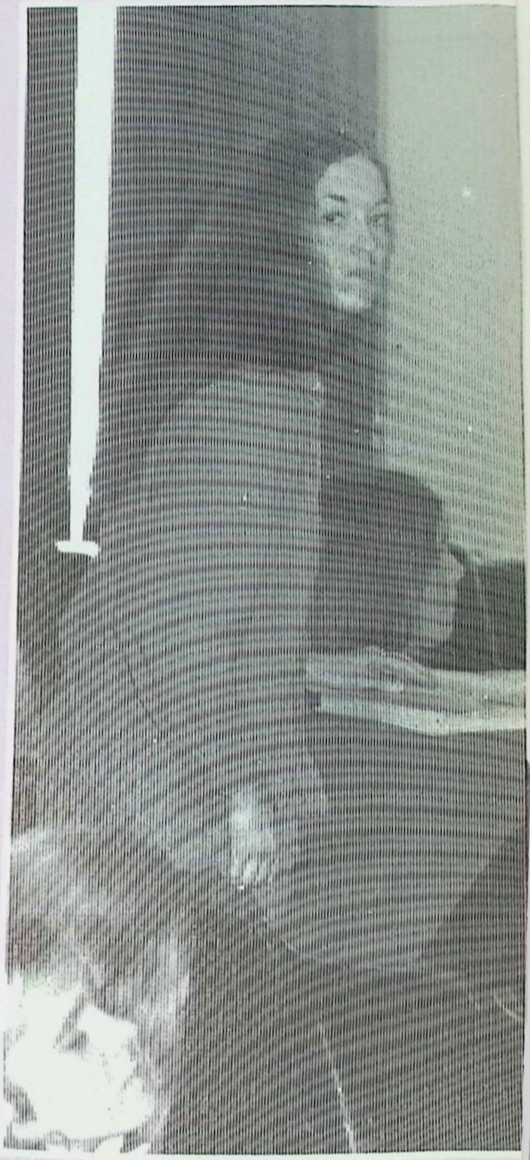


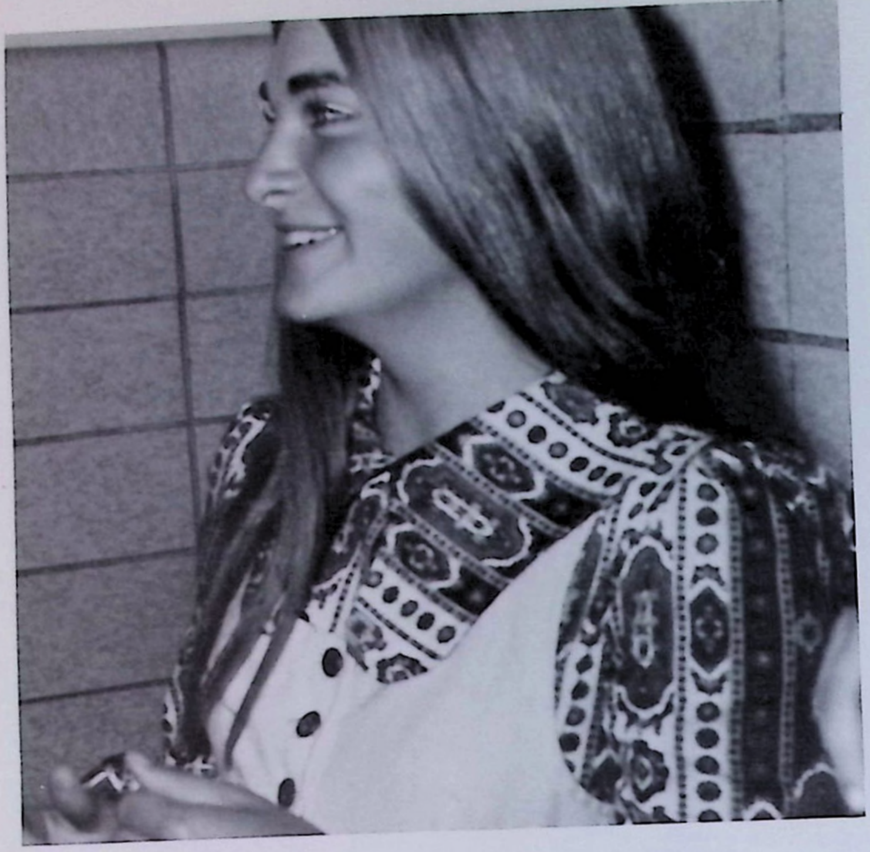
Being a senior is a feeling and an experience that will be remembered always. We look forward to the excitement of the new life ahead and the beginning of a difference in routine. We dread the sadness and grief of the friends we are losing contact with.

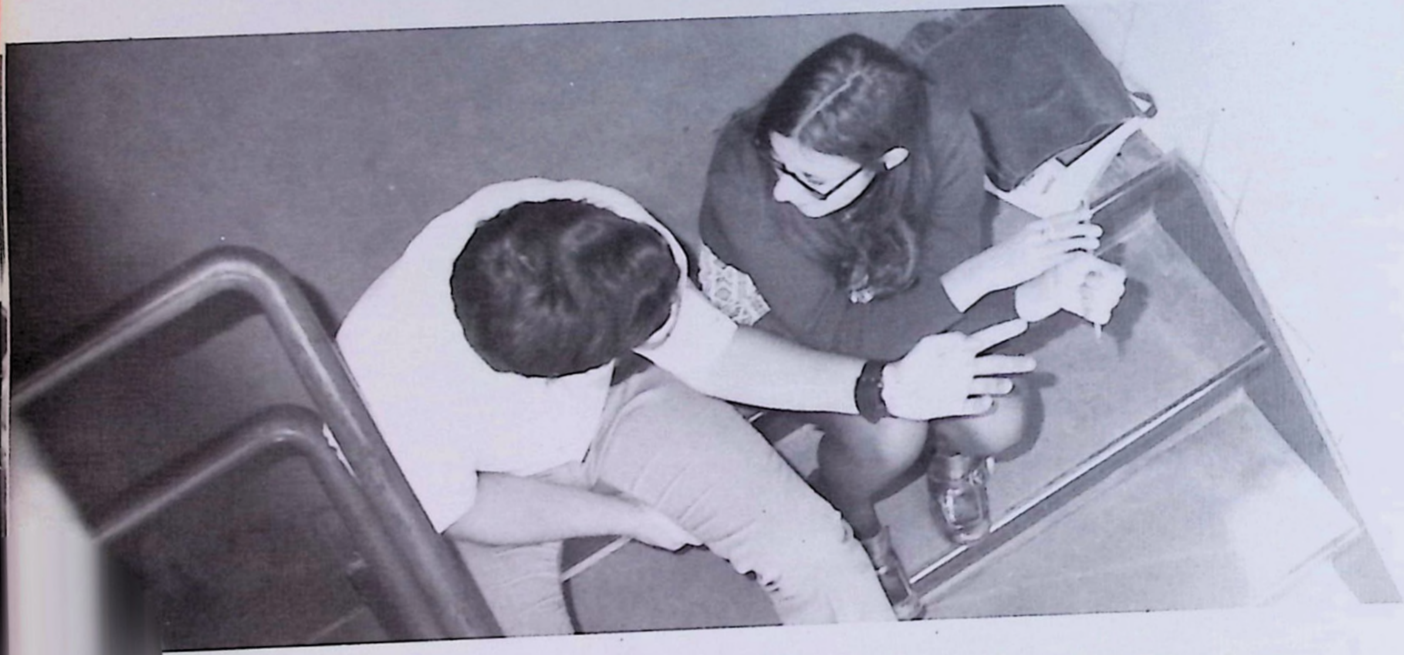
DO IT



Being a senior is having senioritis and going to a booze party instead of staying home and studying.

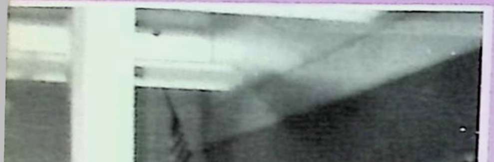




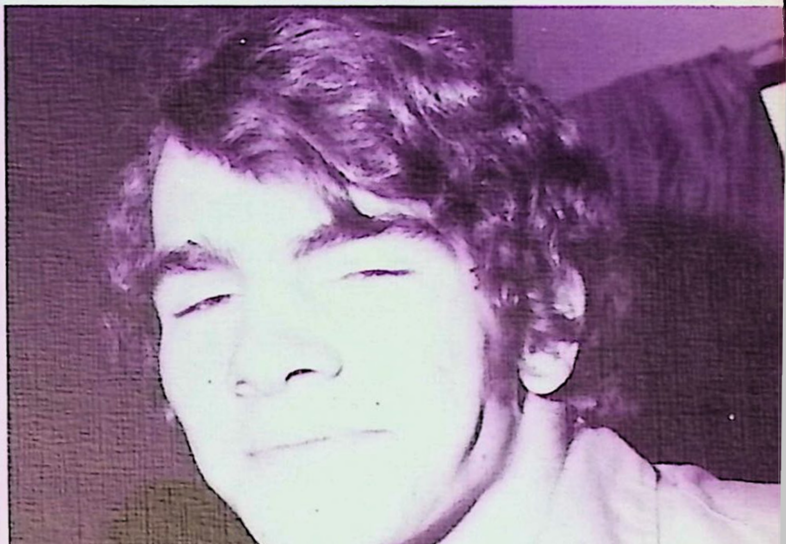


Being a senior is the mixed feeling of elation and sadness when you realize you will soon be on your own.

Being a senior means looking into the future and wondering about it. It is a time in our lives when we must come face to face with reality.



It is also a time of finding out who you really are, and maybe even more important, who you want to be.



Sadness is a part of being a senior. The friends we've had for years will soon no longer be just around the corner. But still we will have our memories of the days we've shared together for such a long time.

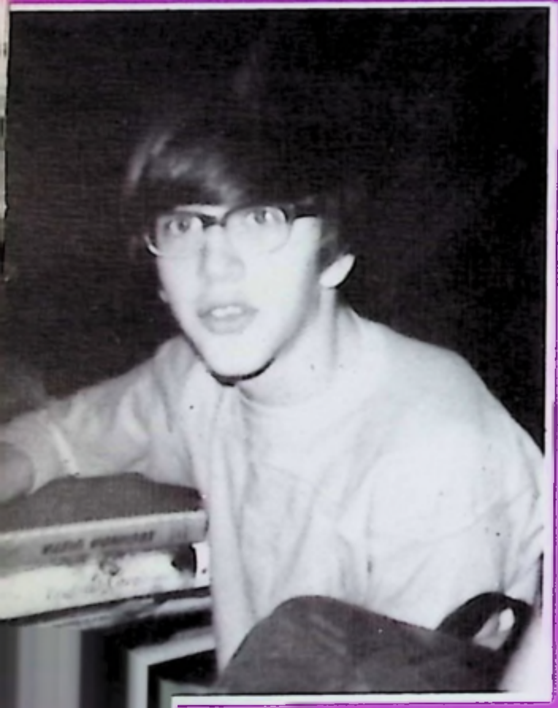
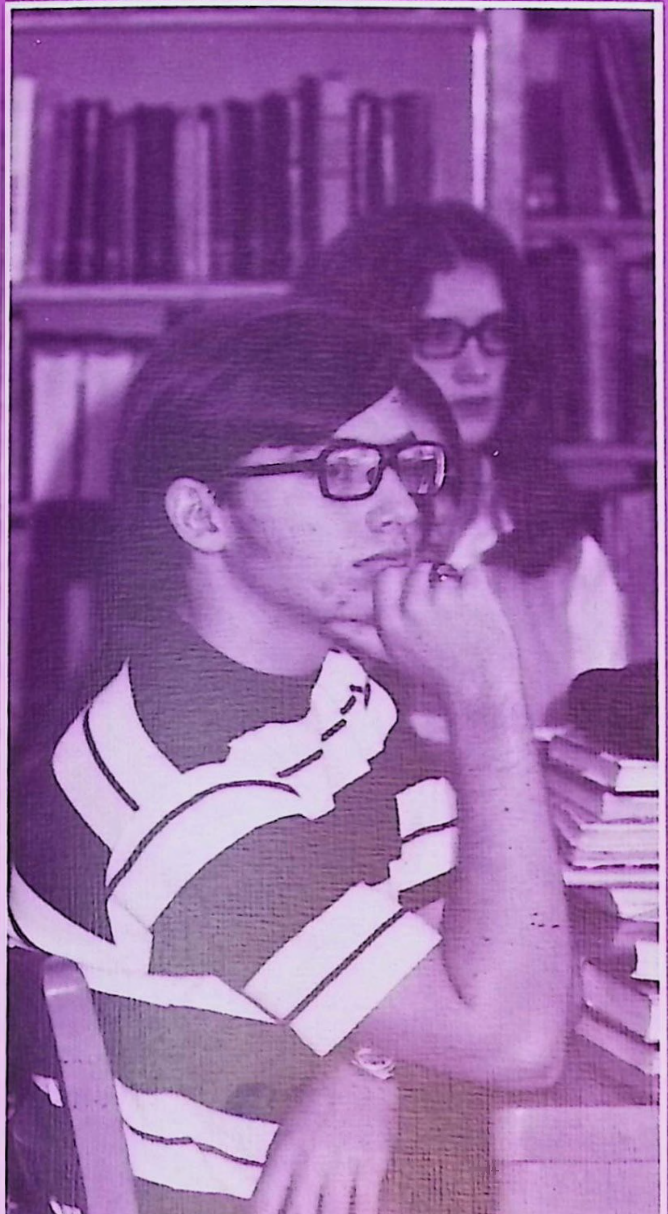
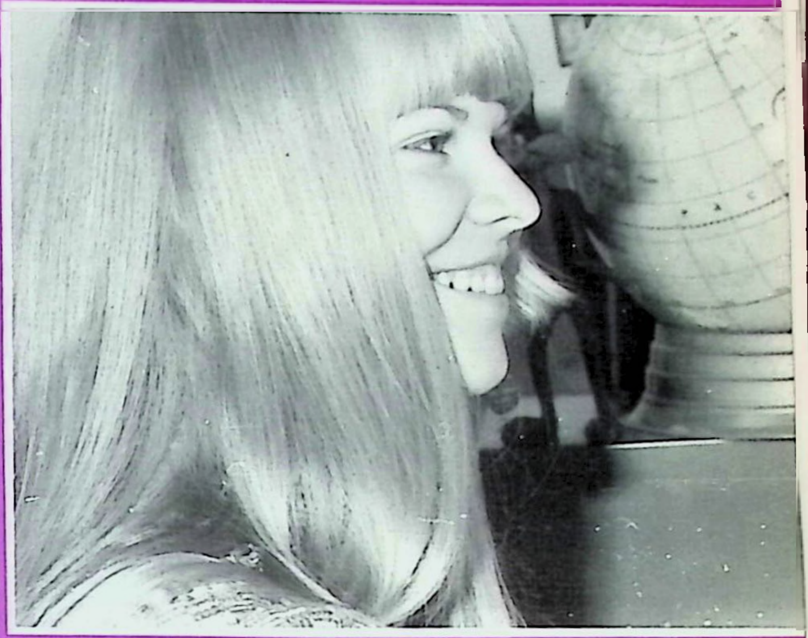
Now

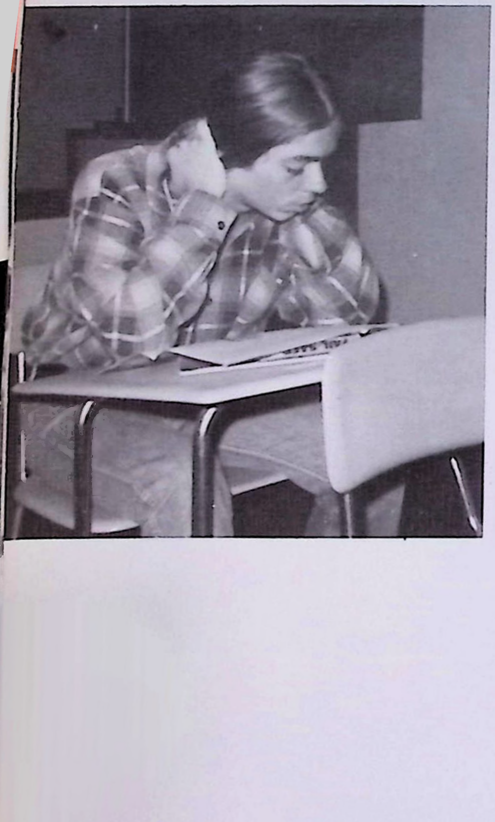


We are right next door to the rest of our lives.





Actually, being a senior scrambles your emotions. Even though you've hated the work, the boredom, and the physical and mental anxieties over the past twelve years, you must look back on the friends you've made, the fun you've had, the experiences you've shared and the memories you'll always have.



Being a Senior signifies the beginning of The End of a Way of Life. Here you stand 17 years old with 13 years of schooling (if you can call it that) behind you and you've got life in front of you. Everyone is hoping that the next step we take will be in the right direction.
